

Loofball Scoresheet: How to Score

The scoresheet, a sheet of paper on which points and vital match details are recorded, is filled by the scorer and reviewed by the assistant scorer. The scores or points and other details must be clearly recorded such that the scoresheet is readable to all. The scoresheet should be filled in the following order.

Before the Match:

The scorer notes down the name of the competition, the date, match code or number, the city, team names, start time and the gym or court name on the upper section of the scoresheet. The scorer also indicates the level and match category by ticking the appropriate boxes. The names of players and coaches (submitted by team coaches) are written on the lower section of the scoresheet. Other details entered include names of referee, line judges, scorer and assistant scorer. The scoresheet must also be signed by the coaches prior to the match.

During the Match:

After the coin toss or change of sides, the scorer notes the side of the court where each team begins play and indicates on the scoresheet the team codes (A or B) and the team to make the first serve (by ticking the “FS” box). In the course of the match, the scorer records the points and notes time-outs (by ticking the ‘T’ box) and the set being played. When a substitution is made, the scorer must indicate the substitute and the substituted player by noting down the outgoing player’s number in the “S” box or cell against the substitute’s name on the lower section of the scoresheet. When a player is booked, the “Y” or “R” cell is checked against the player’s name for a yellow or red card respectively. The scorer announces the Combat Points after each combat.

Tips on how to record points

- Combat Points are ticked or marked only when a team wins a combat.
- The first or second set ends when a team attains Combat Points of 25 with a 2 point advantage.
- The third set ends when a team attains Combat Points of 20 with a 2 point advantage.

- When both teams attain equal Combat Points of 24, the first team to lead by 2 points wins the set (applies to first or second set).
- When both teams attain equal Combat Points of 19, the first team to lead by 2 points wins the set (applies to the third set).
- At the end of a set, the last Combat Points are recorded as Set Points.

After the Match:

A match ends in the second or third set when a team wins 2 sets. At the end of a match, the scorer notes the time (end time) and records the Set Points in the “Match Result” area on the lower left section of the scoresheet. The match result is approved when the referee, the scorer, the assistant scorer and the team captains sign against their names (entered before the match) on the lower right section of the score sheet.
